THOSE GAY AND FESTIVE (—).
WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY MONROE H. ROSENFIELD.

Pants? Well, list, and I'll tell ye, noble boy; I wore them in my palmy days of joy. The pattern new—quite gorgeous in array? Well, rather, though they've seen a better day.

This vest, a good investment, by the bye. This coat? My coat of arms, you see, when I Small part played upon the road last year. This hat, likewise, it wants a nap, I fear.

But, all in all, you must admit they make A fine impression, though they are a "fake." Here at the seaside people little dream That things are not exactly what they seem.

You think they look familiar? Yes, perhaps. They've done a turn for me down in the traps quite off. One turn deserves another, so I gayly hash them forth where'er I go.

When Winter comes along, and dates are rare, I take them to my "Uncle"—spout them there; And then they're resurrected in the Spring, Fresh as the daisies when the song birds sing.

Here, down beside the beach, where billows roar, I find myself the hero of the shore; The ladies gaze with admiration grand, The while I proudly sport upon the strand.

In grandeur thus I strut about, arrayed, And, with a form divine, I captivate each maid. I'm taken for a count, and act upon the plan That, in my case, the clothes do make the man.

But, ah! base mortal I, thus vain and proud, These garments rich, alas! they seem a shroud— The while my conscience stings with rebuff, For they're the comp'ny's "props," and but a bluff!

TOM JACKSON'S BRIEF.
WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

The senior member of the law firm of Graves & Hatch was thrown from his carriage two days before Thanksgiving, and was carried into his house in Forty-seventh Street, New York, with a broken leg. Hatch was in Europe. The accident was a source of common concern to Mr. Graves, for he had an important case to try in two days, and he tossed uneasily on the bed with his leg in splints and worried himself into a fever. At last he said to his wife:

"Send for Tom Jackson."

Tom came, and was shown into the sick chamber. He was about twenty-three, modest and neatly dressed. Said Mr. Graves:

"Draw up a chair near to the bed, Tom. You have been with our firm for nearly two years now, I believe, and have been successful with most of the minor cases in the smaller courts. I am glad to say that both Mr. Hatch and myself are well pleased with your progress."

Tom tried to interrupt his employer with a deprecatory remark, but Mr. Graves motioned him to silence, and continued:

"I believe you have prepared some of the papers in the case of Scott vs. the Elevated Railroad Company, and are familiar with the issues involved. As I shall be unable to try the case, I have decided to let you take my place."

"Oh, Mr. Graves!" exclaimed Tom, all in tremble. Mr. Graves continued, without noticing the interruption:

"Yes, I am going to give you a chance. If you win I shall give you a check for $1,500. I don't want to hear any protests about incapacity. I know what you can do, and now, my dear boy, concentrate all your energies. Carefully sift the evidence. If you lose, I shall know you have done your best. Don't fret because you have not had my experience. Go in to win. I shall now dismiss the subject from my mind, because the thoughts of it threaten to retard my recovery."

Tom bowed and rose to go. As he laid his hand on the door knob, Mr. Graves exclaimed:

"Remember, Tom, I don't want to hear anything about the case until it is decided. If you win, come here and get your check immediately."

The sick man sank wearily upon his pillow, and Tom left the room, closing the door softly behind him. He went down the richly carpeted stairs in a dream, and stumbled over the door mat in his preoccupation, into the arms of a pretty chambermaid. He blushingly apologized, and ran down the front steps into the street, muttering:

"That $1,500 will pay the mortgage!"

He caught his breath hard at this thought, and memory carried him back to the little farm in the Mohawk Valley, which had been mortgaged that he might be educated. He remembered how his father had carried that burden of debt for five weary years without complaint, and what sacrifice of personal comfort his mother had made that her boy might become something higher than a farm laborer. It was very near the time for the foreclosing of the mortgage, too, and Tom did not know whether it could be renewed or not. Oh, for the logical brain of a Webster, or the winning tongue of a Henry Clay for only one short week! These reflections nearly unsewed Tom, as he seated himself in the elevated railway carriage and was whirled rapidly toward the office of the law firm in the Equitable Building. Then he went over his experience. He had nothing to reproach himself with on the score of morals or extravagance. Every week regularly half his meagre salary of $15 per week had been sent to his parents. But this was eaten up by taxes, interest and the expenses of living, for Tom remembered with a sigh that his father was getting very old, and could do little work on the farm. Then a revision of feeling came to him. Why shouldn't he win the case? Other men younger than he had done greater things. He knew the law on the subject thoroughly, and was perfectly acquainted with the facts in the case, and didn't Carlyle say that if an end was to be gained, all thoughts of sentiment and feeling should be rigidly set aside unless they served as aids to the achieve the result desired? And so, brushing aside all considerations but those associated with the work in hand, Tom entered the office, took off his coat and was soon deeply engaged in the making out of subpoenas and arranging of other papers in the case of Scott vs. The Elevated Railroad Co. But he couldn't efface from his mind the picture of that $1,500 check. He saw it dancing on the desk before him, with the scrawly signature of Mr. Graves at the bottom, and "pay to the order of Thomas Jackson" was the legend inscribed on the wall before him.

"Polly," said Farmer John Jackson to his wife, in the humble farm house in the Mohawk Valley, as he set the milk pail on the floor of the kitchen, on the evening of the day when Mr. Graves was injured, "I guess I'll take a trip to 'Yore, to see Tom about that mortgidge."

He promised faithfully to obey these injunctions, for some such ideas as these had occurred to himself. When his wife had tied his black necktie and brushed his felt hat, he started for the depot with a valise in his hand containing some Winter pears and Fall pippins from Tom's favorite trees in the orchard. It seemed but a whisk and a roar to the bewildered old man, this trip to the city, although it consumed the greater part of the day. He caught one of her most particular injunctions to her husband was:

"Now, John, you be sure to see if Tom's trousers don't want some buttons sewed on, and you might see if his stockings has holes in the heels. If they has, bring 'em home with ye, so I can darn 'em."

He promised faithfully to obey these injunctions, for some such ideas as these had occurred to himself. When his wife had tied his black necktie and brushed his felt hat, he started for the depot with a valise in his hand containing some Winter pears and Fall pippins from Tom's favorite trees in the orchard. It seemed but a whisk and a roar to the bewildered old man, this trip to the city, although it consumed the greater part of the day. He caught counsel interested the old man greatly. He listened with amazement to the eloquence of his boy, as he summed up for the prosecution. The speech consumed half an hour, and his voice was so clear that every word he said was distinctly heard by the delighted father. When Tom had reached the middle of his speech he began to falter. The knowledge of the skill and resources of the opposing counsel came to him so strongly that he stammered and almost broke down. Just at this critical moment, when a sympathetic silence had fallen upon the court room, the father noticed the weakness of his boy, and rising on tiptoe he shouted:

"Don't be afraid Tom, your Pop's here!"

The effect was electrical both upon Tom and the familiar everything seemed to Tom! He listened with interest to his mother's story of how the bridle cow's legs had gone through the bridge, and how she was lifted out with a derrick. He felt sad for a time when he learned that his old schoolmaster was dead and buried, and felt a thrill of satisfaction when he learned that Tillie Malcolm was still unmarried. The only thing to mar the happiness of the reunion was the effort of his father to bring around the subject of the mortgage, to which Tom invariably replied:

"Never mind that now, father, we'll attend to it later."

The reunited family spent the evening together, and Mrs. Jackson listened with delight to the tale from her husband's lips of the scenes at the trial; and when the time came for the reading of the chapter, the old man took the Bible from the mantel and read the chapter about the green pastures and the still waters. As he finished the chapter and was about to close the volume, the book mark fluttered to the floor. The farmer stooped to pick it up, and found it between his fingers, as he exclaimed apologetically:

"I don't want to hurry you, sonny, but I should like to talk about the mortgage before we go to bed, so's to ease my mind a little. Ye see, we may have to lose the farm, unless we can raise some money. I'd like to have your advice about it, the —"

Farmer Jackson looked up and caught a broad smile upon his son's face. He was puzzled. He could not understand his boy's manner. He was just about to ask for an explanation of his strange conduct, when his eye caught the bookmark. He took off his spectacles and rubbed them carefully, and then looked over the piece of paper. To his amazement he read the words:

"Nov. 25, 1890.

"Pay to the order of John Jackson, $1,500." He looked at Tom, who was now laughing outright.

"Where did this check come from?" said he.

"I put it there," answered Tom.

"And is it mine?" stammered the old man, stunned by his good fortune.

"Every cent," was the reply.

"Then the farm is saved!" exclaimed Tom's mother, who had risen and was looking over husband's shoulder at the magical bit of paper. Then ensued a scene such as is recorded in the Bible as having occurred hundreds of years ago, when a father fell upon the neck of his son and kissed him, only in this case the mother also did her share of the embracing.

ERNEST JARROLD.

MAUDE WILSON.

This bright young actress and singer, the subject of our portrait, was born at Nashville, Tenn., receiving her education at the College for Young Ladies in that city. She was the recipient of vocal instruction from local teachers, and her first appearance was made at concerts and church fairs at Nashville. Miss Wilson is Miss Smith in private life, her mother, Eliza Delaro, marrying a gentleman of that name. Early in life she moved to Philadelphia, and there her contralto voice was further cultivated. In the Summer of 1887 she made her professional debut in "The Little Tycoon." Her next appearance was with the "In the Swim" Co. She joined the McCull Opera Co. in 1888, and when "The Lady or the Tiger" was first produced she created the part of Daronna. She then went with Duff's Opera Co., singing in "A Trip to Africa," "The Beggar Student," etc. The following season she joined the "Natural Gas" Co., and made a nice success out of the role of Daisy. When "The City Directory" was produced she was one of the Rosibuds, continuing successfully in the same part during the greater portion of the recent run of the piece at the Bijou, this city. She is at present studying music at Philadelphia, and will most likely journey to Europe before long, to perfect herself more fully in singing, her intention being to adopt the opera stage permanently. She has a sunny face and disposition, and thus early in her career has earned an enviable reputation as a singer of ability.

THEEBAW ADVERTISES HIS BRAND.

A favorite and apparently successful method of advertising is to publish testimonials from those who have benefited by the particular article which is thus brought under public notice. One of the best advertisements of the kind comes from the pen of Theebaw, the deposed monarch of the Burmese, a translation of which recently was published in The Rangoon Gazette. It is designed for a particular brand of cigars, and appears upon every box of those luxuries. It runs as follows:

"My late father, the Royal Mindon Min, the Golden-footed Lord of the White Elephant, Master of a thousand gold Umbrellas, owner of the Royal Peacock, Lord of the Sea and of the World, whose face was like the Sun, always smoked the Escof Cheroot, while meditating on his treatment of the bull-faced, earth-swallowing English. Had I done the same, I should never have lost my throne; but I used the opium drugged cheroots from Manila and the trash which was sent me from San Francisco, and I fell. Theebaw, formerly King—Chambers' Journal.

GRATITUDE.

MR. S. P. C. CHILDERS.—Boy, you shouldn't beg; it's disgraceful. But don't cry—I'll give you ten cents for that paper you have there.

UCHIN (blubbering).—I wouldn't beg, boss, if—if I could meet such ch—ch—champs as you are every day.

AGRICULTURAL.—Hokus—"So Count Ratowsky has at last married Miss Twiney, the daughter of the agricultural implement man!" Pokus—"Guess he will rake in a big jackpot, eh?" Hokus—"Not if I know Twiney. The marriage is likely to prove more of a binder than a reaper."

A POINT OF SUPERIORITY.—Miss Manhattan.—But certainly you must admit that New Yorkers are the best dressed men in the world? Miss Lakely.—Well, anyhow, it is acknowledged that Chicago produces the best dressed beef.—Puck.

Mrs. Jackson looked over her specs at her husband, to convince herself that he was in earnest, and exclaimed:

"Be you crazy, John Jackson? You never was so far away from home in your life! You ain't strong enough to stand such a long journey. You'll be seven next week."

"But something's got to be done, or we'll lose the farm, Polly. I know Tom ain't got no money, but I want to talk over the matter with him. I rather think Tom would be glad to see his Pop down yonder."

Mrs. Jackson sighed and shook her head, and, by her silence, her husband concluded that she would not object further to his trip. Mr. Jackson had other thoughts about his boy, which he did not express to his wife, for fear of alarming her. He had read of the temptations of city life, and he feared that perhaps these had been too strong for Tom to resist. At bedtime that night he wiped his spectacles with unusual care, and drew the well-thumbed Bible toward him, with the intention of reading the customary chapter. As he leafed through the sacred book, his gaze caught the phrase: "And a certain man went down to Jericho and fell among thieves." He looked up quickly, half afraid that his wife was watching him, and had interpreted his thoughts. But Mrs. Jackson was quietly knitting, with a troubled look on her face. She was afraid that she might lose her husband in the whirlpool of the big city. As the old man turned over the leaves of the Bible, he found a book mark made from half a sheet of note paper. It was opposite to the chapter containing the story of the prodigal son. He read the chapter in a trembling voice, and the old couple knelt, and the farmer prayed aloud, first for his boy, and then that the mortgage might be lifted.

The next morning Mrs. Jackson brought out her husband's Sunday clothes from the trunk where they had borrowed the scent of cedar wood put there to drive away the moths, together with the stock collar, somewhat frayed at the edge through long usage. There was a button off the coat, which she replaced with trembling fingers, and a patch to put on the vest. As she did this a necessary work for her husband, she remembered that her boy was alone in the big city with no one to mend his clothes, and a fleeting glimpse of Albany, and then came flying down the banks of the Hudson, while the car wheels sang a strange metallic tune, and the marvelous panorama of river and mountains shot by the car windows. The long ride had stiffened the old man's legs as he stood up to sit at the Grand Central Depot. The shouts of the hack drivers and the noises of the city streets bewildered him. His quaint appearance attracted the attention of a big policeman, who asked him where he was going.

"I'm going to visit my boy, Tom Jackson."

"Where does he live? What street and number?"

"Blamed if I know! I forgot to ask Polly. But that don't make no difference. I kin easy find him. Everybody knows my Tom. Why," he continued proudly, "you must a seen him yourself—he's'nig as big as you be. Best boy you ever see. Don't put on no airs. You see, I was afraid he'd get homesome down here without seein' some of his kin."

The officer looked at the eager face of the old man, and smiled. He took the farmer to a drug store, and found his son's name in the directory, which only confirmed Mr. Jackson's estimate of his boy's worth, for he exclaimed: "I guess my boy's some punkins in this town, ain't he?" That night he put up at a cheap hotel, and didn't sleep a wink because of the noise of wagon wheels and the roar of the elevated trains. The next morning, just after sunrise, he went down to the Equitable building, expecting to find his boy at work in room 92. He was surprised to learn that lawyers did not begin work before nine or ten o'clock, and spent the time between seven o'clock and nine o'clock riding up and down in the "cage machine," as he called the elevator. Then the clerk of the office came, and told the now anxious farmer that the great case of Scott vs. The Elevated Railway Co. was on in the Court of General Sessions, and that his son was conducting the plaintiff's argument. Conducted by the clerk, Mr. Jackson and the value found their way to the court room. It was jammed to the doors. The old man managed to squeeze inside, and over the heads of the crowd—for he was tall man—he could see the boy whom he had dandied on his knee, cross examining witness.

The gravity of the judge, the impassability of the jury and the sharp wit that passed between the court. It inspired the boy with confidence, and, although he blushed, his utterance became clear and forcible once more. The gavel of the Judge came down with a bang as he said: "Order in the Court," and Mr. Jackson was led out into the corridor, and threatened with arrest if he didn't keep his mouth shut.

Then the Judge charged the jury, and they retired, affording Tom a chance to sit near his father, and to shake his hand. The Judge also unbent a little of his official dignity, and was introduced to the farmer. If Tom had been tried for murder, he could not have been more uneasy than he was while waiting for the verdict. Although they were out only fifteen minutes, it seemed a week to Tom as the old dust covered clock slowly ticked off the minutes. He was weak from the hard work and excitement of the past forty-eight hours. At last the twelve men reappeared, the Court reassembled and the foreman stood up. Tom thought his heart would break through his ribs with the frightful tension. Then the foreman spoke:

"The jury find a unanimous verdict against the railway company for $10,000 and costs."

Tom seized his hat, and, waiting only to tell his father to stay in the court room until he returned, he hastened to the house of Mr. Graves. In less than an hour he returned, thoroughly composed and smiling.

As they left the court room together, Mr. Jackson said:

"Tom, I came down to see if we couldn't do something about that mort—"

"Oh, yes," interrupted Tom; "that's all right. What have you got in the value?"

"A dozen times during the afternoon and evening the old father tried to get Tom to talk about the encumbrance on the farm, but always without success. For Tom evaded the subject. They dined that evening at the most expensive restaurant in the city, and afterwards went to the theatre, and early on Thanksgiving Day, were whirling homeward over the New York Central Railroad.

Tom was boisterous all the way, and his father could not understand his mirth. They arrived home just in time to eat the Thanksgiving dinner. How

[Special Dispatch to the New York Clipper.]

BOSTON, Aug. 12.—The city is overflowing with visitors, and it appears as if the entire country had come down on us. JACOB'S CIRCUS.—Jacob's Cleveland's Minstrels are underlined for 22.

HOBOKEN.—The Henry Burlesque Co. began their tour at Crohn's Theatre, Aug. 11. Manager Smith promised something elaborate for an opening act. Manager Crohn, who is his son, went toward it in the way of a new carpet for the stage. The house was packed, and the performance made a hit from the start. "The Art Reception" opened the bill. It was beautifully staged. V. Monteure and Heath jointly contributed to the fun, and after the curtain call, the audience was rewarded. The old included Herbert Crowley, McIntyre and Heath, Helen Courtland, Will West, Jimmie Carroll and Ed Connors, who satisfied the audience. After each specialty there was a round of applause. Marguerite St. John and Geo. M. Wood have, by three series of representations for The Evening World's Baby Babies Fund, donated over $2,000 to that party—a magnificent record. VAUDEVILLES AND THE MINSTRELS.

NOTES FROM GEORGE THATCHER'S MINSTRELS.—Business has been remarkably large, in spite of the intense heat, ever since the opening. Mrs. George Thatcher and a theatre party came from Plainfield, N.J., to attend the opening performance at Hartford. R. F. Jose is singing Paul Dresser's "Lone Grove," and nightly receives a triple encore. Raymond Moore never fails to earn the same recognition. Our street parade is very favorably commented on in each city. The nobby cream colored silk coats and the tout ensemble of the makeup have been pronounced the effect par excellence for street display. Thomas LeMack has renewed his former successes, and receives an ovation nightly. John Frees, stage manager for Rich & Martin Atheneum Co., is with us temporarily. John W. Smith is warmly received nightly, and his success in minstrelsy is undeniable. A novel idea as to the disposition of fuses has been happily hit upon by the management. The customary fines in this branch of the profession for misdemeanor or failure to comply with the rules have always been turned over to the management. In this company, Mr. Thatcher has determined that all money so received shall be given to the Actors' Fund. But if the good discipline so far shown by the company continues, the Fund will never grow rich from this source. Harmony seems to exist and thrive in all directions, and the organization is like a happy family. Charles Wheeler (Mr. Thatcher's nephew) is in advance of the company.

THESE people were at the Novelty Theatre, Ogden, Utah, last week: Tracy and Price, Colburn and Merritt, Mile, Anna, Byron and Bianchi, Clifford and Phoenix, Fannie Gorman, Pearl Ardine, Libby Marretta, Mabel Rivers, Maud Clayton and Billy Kennedy.

THESE people were at the Casino Theatre, Richmond, Va., last week: J. C. Donovan, Bessie Doyle, Mile, Marie, Leona De Forrest, Nellie Forrest, Little Miller, Blanche Du Pois and Joe Miller.

Early in September he will return to London, and a month or so later will again return to this country, bringing with him the Brothers Tucci, with whom he informs us, he has signed a year's contract for a tour of America. The Tucci Twins are remembered as an exceedingly interesting curiosity in the way of showing Nature's peculiar handiwork when in a freaky mood. They were once exhibited in this country by Barnum.

PERCY PASCO writes from Baltimore as follows: "For your readers' information and the benefit of my friends, I desire to state that we have temporarily parted from the profession and have embarked in the never-to-be-forgotten business of papa—controlling interest in the 'Harlem News Depot,' where I will be pleased at all times to see my old associates, who will always find a hearty welcome and the Old Reliable CLIPPER. Right here I will state that in the sale of the various dramatic and sporting papers THE CLIPPER more than holds her own."

SATURDAY, AUGUST 16, 1890.

QUERIES ANSWERED.No Replies by Mail or Telegraph.

Addressees or whereabouts not given. All in quest of such should write to those whom they seek, in care of the CLIPPER Post Office. All letters will be advertised one week gratis. The route of any theatrical company can be ascertained by referring to the CLIPPER under page. We cannot send routes by mail or telegraph.

THEATRICAL.
 J. G. C., Parkersburg.—1. Although the profession at large is already overcrowded, the chances in the line you name are a little better than in most any other. 2. One dollar for one insertion.

F. W. H., San Francisco.—See the notice at the head of this column.

O. P. P., Baltimore.—All the routes we intend to publish you will find on the second page of THE CLIPPER this week. As for the rosters, we make them known from week to week, as fast as they are completed. Our space is too crowded to justify a repetition of them.

IGNORANCE.—Nobody has ever satisfactorily answered the question you compound. The act is very ancient, and neither of the three you name can claim to be its originator.

H. D.—We take it the choice is not sectional, but depends solely upon the character of the attraction. 2. It would cost lawyers' fees, court expenses, etc. Send for THE CLIPPER ANNUAL for 1889, which gives full instructions. 4. Yes. 5. See for it. 6. Yes, there are plenty of them in this city.

J. E. K., Atlanta.—Yes. 2. No. 3. Dead. 4. Yes. 5. See "Turf answers."

A. G. P., Washington.—We cannot undertake to vouch for, or even to define, the responsibility of any manager or firm of managers. The man you name has been long in the business, and has had his shares of ups and downs. That is all we care to say.

M. J. D., New Bedford.—There is an editor for each department.

BROS., Guilford.—Address Simmonds & Brown, 1441 Broadway, N. Y. City.

E. S. R., Put-in-Bay.—State the character of the resorts—health or what? Your query is too indefinite.

A. G. A., Rochester.—The fair list was published in THE CLIPPER of Aug. 2.

G. P. C., Seccane.—It is not published. Write to H. S. Taylor, who advertises in this issue. He will put you on the right track, no doubt.

J. W. B., Helena.—See notice at the head of this column.

Mrs. C. A. R., Chippewa Falls.—See the notice at the head of this column.

BALDWIN.—See the notice at the head of this column.

T. W. C., Plymouth.—See the notice at the head of this column.

New York Express, Carilliac.—All the information we possess, and can properly give, as to the movements of that troupe will be found in our route list from week to week.

C. D.—See the notice at the head of this column. That rule is imperative.

O. M. CO.—A list of fairs, etc., was published in THE CLIPPER of Aug. 2. For other "pointers" we advise you to consult an experienced manager or agent who has traveled in that branch of the business.

G. W. B., Cohoes.—Write to the Great American Engraving and Printing Co., Beck Street, this city.

E. T., Providence.—You ask "when he played there." You mean, probably, when he last played there. Write to the actor himself, at the Academy of Music, this city. He will gladly tell you, and it will save time, for we should have to ask him.

R. E. G.—It is available, and will be used in a few weeks, perhaps.

Miss J. B., Philadelphia.—You had better save your money and continue at your present employment. We are not aware that there is an alarming demand for amateur soubrettes. Reputable agents would not receive your application, and those who are not reputable might not treat you fairly.

EDWARD.—We have not made a personal count, and do not wish to accept the box office figures; so we must decline to accept the responsibility of deciding your query.

R. J. V., Montgomery.—See the notice at the head of this column.

J. S., Corry.—Make your design yourself, and a spar maker or carpenter will get it out for you.

G. M.—1. See the cards of various teachers of the banjo in our advertising columns. 2. We do not wish to put a price. That is the teachers' (and your) look out. 3. From $25 a week up. 4. There is no average about it. The best of them get as high as $100, the others down to $25.

C. L. M., Dallas.—From $200 to $250. 2. Yes. 3. From $200 upwards. Everything depends upon the cleverness of the troupe.

Mrs. J. M. C. L., Waynesville.—See the notice at the head of this column.

CONSTANT READER, Nashville.—We cannot give information of that character through this department. Write to the publisher of the photograph in question.

B. & C., Clarksville.—We cannot say, of our own knowledge, that he did. We will simply assert that we never saw him do it. Other riders have done it, however, to their personal knowledge, and it is likely that some performance as the one you name can also accomplish it. Why not write and ask him?

D. R. R., Ottawa.—It is no doubt "the same old game." Beware of it. The name used is a feeble counterfeiter of a reputable firm's name.

K. D. V. H.—Answer next week.

S. C. H., Chicago.—Answer next week.

CARDS.

FARIBAULT, Fairfax.—He must be given the next card, and before any of the players who follow him enter.

E. G. B., Philadelphia.—He scores one point only. See reply to "S. T. L., Philadelphia."

I. K. O., Nashville.—The dealer must turn the widow.

CONSTANT READER, Lansing.—A wins. See reply above to "Constant Reader, Lansing."

S. T. L., Philadelphia.—The player ordering it up and making three tricks, scores only one. If his opponent had made three tricks he would have been entitled to score two more, but as he did not, the player who assumes the responsibility of the trump has that right. The dealer, in the case cited, could not go alone, if the game had been played properly.

D. M., Brooklyn.—A was wrong in his claim, according to your statement. The dummy must be turned for B, who is entitled to a draw. It makes no material difference who does the turning.

F. S. R., Denver.—He gets the next card. See reply to "Faribault, Fairfax."

M. A., Hoboken.—Yes, provided he has enough to put him out. Your query, by the way, was rather sparing of details.

J. J. B., Rochester.—A must deal next. C is entitled to the next card.

G. C. M., Philadelphia.—If A, the player who ordered it up, makes only three tricks he counts but one, and if B, his opponent, gets three tricks, he is entitled to score two—for the eucrhe. When the game is played correctly, two men cannot go alone.

at the same time, as occurred in the case cited. The player assuming the responsibility of the trump alone has that right. See reply to "A. B.," and "S. T. L.," Philadelphia.

J. A. B., Brooklyn.—The player first receiving cards is the one to lead, when the game is properly played. But when, by mutual consent, you let another start old ruff, you make not one for your own circle, you should also agree upon all disputes arising from such puerile methods. We cannot "decide the bet," simply because you failed to state it.

A. B.—A was wrong in his claim. He cannot go alone, unless it is especially agreed to play in that absurd way. Only the player who assumes the responsibility of the trump by making it, taking it up, or ordering it up can go alone, and gain aught by it. See reply "G. C. M., Philadelphia."

A. F. B.—The count in cribbage, for a hand composed of three 7's and two aces, is twenty, twelve of which are fifteen.

BASEBALL, CRICKET, ETC.

F. S., Jamestown.—The Red Stockings of Cincinnati, played fifty-seven games in 1869, winning all except the return contest on their own grounds Aug. 20, with the Union Club, of Lansingburg, better known as the Haymakers, the score then being a tie, 17 to 17. The Cincinnati won the game play at Lansingburg, N. Y., by a score of 38 to 31. Their present record is over 100, over the Forest City, of Rockford, three over the Olympics, of Washington, and two over the Atlantics and Eckfords, of Brooklyn. Athletics, of Philadelphia, Mutuals, of New York City, Forest City, of Cleveland, and Irvington, of Irvington, N. J.

A. A. W., Brooklyn.—The old Polo Grounds in this city had a measurement of about 400 feet in width and 930 in length. 2. The seating capacity of the grand stand on the old Polo Grounds was about three thousand.

W. J. H., Erie.—A loses. The winning club did not make more runs in two innings than the losing one did in the first.

W. H., Philadelphia.—1. The United States and Canada did not play that year. 2. The longest stand for the tenth wicket in an important match was 157, made by Parnham and White for the North vs. South of England June 14, 1886, at Lord's Ground, London, Eng.

R. C., Chicago.—Elmer Smith'sfeat of retiring the Milwaukee without a hit and facing only twenty-eight men is not the best on record. It has been surpassed several times. Richmond retired the Cleveland June 12, 1880, and John Ward shut out the Buffaloes June 17, 1880, without a man reaching first base and with only twenty-seven men going to the bat in each game.

BILLIARDS, POOL, ETC.

E. K., Boston.—You were entitled to play upon the ball if the greater part or more than half of the ball was outside the string line.

PARK HOTEL, Orange.—The game properly ends when it is impossible for one or more players to either tie or win the high man, consequently No. 3 was justified in claiming the game at the time when he had acquired six balls and No. 2 had five balls.

DICE, DOMINOES, ETC.

A READER, Harrisburg.—Two throws in the correct way, though not allowed by previous agreement may make the allowable. The dice must be thrown or rather rolled, cleared of the box, and are somewhat indefinite in your request.

R. H. M., Middletown.—Yes.

A READER.—A wins. Deuces are higher than aces, when no agreement to contrary is made.

RING.

J. W. C., San Francisco.—They fought to a finish for a purse. 2. We do not recognize that weight.

AQUATIC.

C. E. W., Hartford.—The opposing parties not having protested before the race, when they were made aware that the others were to row with sliding seats, the referee did right in awarding the victory to Shea and Turley.

N. W. B., New London.—Such a boat can have either a stationary or sliding seat, as preferred by the crew. In the old time, before the introduction of the movable seat, both shell and working boats were rigged with the fixed seat; consequently the same objection to the use of sliding seats in a race would hold good now for shells if it did not of boats of other classes used in races. It is the make of the boat proper, not the style of seat with which it is fitted, that constitutes the style of craft.

ATHLETIC.

E. R., Bath.—The affidavits received are considered entirely satisfactory.

J. B., Philadelphia.—Send twenty-five cents to the Secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, P. O. Box 611, N. Y. City, for a copy of the Hand Book of the A. A. U., which gives full directions for building a cataract.

J. F. L., Buffalo.—Write to Ed. James & Co., whose address is in advertisement, for a copy of "The Manual of Sporting Rules," which contains all the information you desire.

TURF.

ROBINSON'S CIRCUS, Corvallis.—Write to chief officers of the roads by which the trip has to be made. That is what we would have to do. Besides, you seem to be familiar with the route. We are not.

W. H. R. and W. H.—In the absence of any condition to the contrary, B, having gone to the stand, must abide by her own accidents, consequently A was entitled to the prize.

R. N. D., Berwick.—Write to the Edison Machine Works, 406 Street, this city.

F. H. N.—That would come under the head of law. We have not made a personal count, and do not wish to accept the box office figures; so we must decline to accept the responsibility of deciding your query.

H. D. C., Sherbrooke.—Write to The Referee, which is incorporated The Tennis Review, Chicago, Ill.

SUBSCRIBER, Brooklyn.—Your friend is right. According to the old calendar, he was born on the eleventh, but the adoption of the Gregorian system in this country advanced it to the date now recognized.

T. W. T. and P. R., Denver.—We have never seen the quotation exactly as you put it. It is very probable, however, that "Seeing's believing, but feeling's the truth," is what you mean.

WHITE, Providence.—You ask "when he played there." You mean, probably, when he last played there. Write to the actor himself, at the Academy of Music, this city. He will gladly tell you, and it will save time, for we should have to ask him.

R. E. G.—It is available, and will be used in a few weeks, perhaps.

Miss J. B., Philadelphia.—We cannot give information of that character through this department. Write to the publisher of the photograph in question.

Statue Island A. C. Cup Race.

The Statue Island Athletic Club have made great preparations for their annual Labor Day celebration, which they evidently intend shall surpass those which afforded pleasure to hundreds of lovers of outdoor sports and festivities in former years.

The chief aquatic event of the celebration will be the annual senior eight oared shell race for the Statue Island Athletic Club $1,000 Challenge Cup, which always produces a grand contest between some of the leading amateur crews of the East, for all are desirous of possessing the elegant and costly trophy which depends on the result of the struggle. The race is open to all invited clubs, the distance is one mile, and it will be governed by the rules of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen and the A. C. Cup. There will also be a race for junior eight oared shell crews, who are more good junior eighties in the East the present season than at any previous time. An entrance fee of $20 each crew is asked, and all entries must be made to F. W. Janssen, 241 and 243 Broadway, N. Y. City, not later than Aug. 18. The club houses, boat houses and grounds will be illuminated with calcium and electric lights during the evening, and Cappa's Seventh Regiment Band will serve to enhance the pleasure of those who attend.

Handicap Swimming Races.

The New York Swimming Club will hold their first open handicap amateur swimming races on Sept. 13. The distances will be 220yds., 440yds. and 880yds., and six valuable prizes will be given in each race. Entrance fee, 50 cents to each race; entries close Sept. 13, with John Hatton, corresponding secretary, foot of East Sixty-fifth Street, New York City. It is the purpose of the club to make swimming as popular as the many other branches of sport. Amongst members of the club is Captain Wm. C. Brown, holder of the 100 yards swimming record; Chas. Renner, Geo. Kenner, G. Bishop Marks, of the Atlanta Boat Club; J. J. McDermott, of the Union Boat Club; Chas. Ams and John Hatton, of the defunct Spartan Harness; Wm. Bull, the speedy swimmer; Chas. T. Duffy, of the Ravenswood Boat Club; Chas. L. Perkins, of the Ramapo Valley Outing Club. The officers of the club are: H. T. Braun, president; Chas. Renner, first vice-president; A. Braun, second vice-president; Chas. Ams, treasurer; Geo. Kenner, recording secretary; John Hatton, corresponding secretary; J. E. Shelling, captain; William Bull, first lieutenant; E. Ams, second lieutenant.

Johnson's Easy Victory.

The steamer Fletcher carried about fifty persons from this city to Oyster Bay, L. I., on Friday, Aug. 1, for the purpose of witnessing the swimming race between J. B. Johnson, the well known English champion of England, and Tom Roberts, of Union, who is to be William Roberts, a good swimmer, but not so fast or powerful or so well known as his antagonist. The stated distance was five hundred yards, straightaway, but the actual distance was rather uncertain. Roberts led at the start, and at one time, a hundred yards or so ahead, held an advantage of about ten yards, but the powerful overhand strokes of Johnson soon overcame this lead, placed the men abreast, and then enabled the Britisher, who is the more powerful swimmer of the two, to assume the lead, which he easily maintained to the finish. He won by about seventy-five yards, in 9m. 28 $\frac{1}{2}$ s. The steamer was well supplied with solid and liquid refreshments, and those who made the trip up the Sound had a royal good time.

Fast Trip by a Tea Ship.

The steamship Glenogle arrived at this port from Japan on Aug. 3, having made the passage in fifty-four days, which beats the time made by the Glenashiel in 1880, which was the previously best on record trip. The Glenogle and Monmouthshire left Japan on June 10, and stopped at various ports in the China seas to complete their cargoes, passing Singapore on June 26, the Glenogle ahead. The latter's cargo included 3,700 tons of tea, and 1,600 tons of rice.

THE TRAVERSE BAY BOAT CLUB, OF HARBOR SPRINGS, MICH., ARE TO HOLD A SAILING AND ROWING REGATTA THERE ON AUG. 13, AND THERE IS EVERY PROSPECT, REAR ADMIRAL J. S. HAIR INFORMS US, THAT IT WILL TURN OUT A VERY SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR. THIS WILL BE THE NUCLEUS OF A MUCH MORE IMPORTANT REGATTA TO BE HELD ON THE SAME WATERS NEXT SEASON, PROVIDED THE EXPECTATIONS OF THE PROJECTORS THIS YEAR ARE REALIZED.

TEN EYCK A WINNER.—The professional consolation race in single sculls at the Lake Superior regatta at Duluth, was won yesterday afternoon, July 28. The distance was the mile, with a turn, and the race was won by James A. Ten Eyck, of Worcester, Mass., in 21m. 20s.; Al Hamm second, in 21m. 22s.; Hugh Wise third, in 21m. 24s., and John McKay fourth.

The swimming competitions for the championship of the Amateur Athletic Union will take place under the auspices of the Manhattan Athletic Club this year. They will come off at Bay Ridge, L. I.

WHILE NEARING THE SHORE AT GLENWOOD STATION, N. Y., Aug. 4, the yacht Alida, returning from the cruise of the New York Yachting Association, capsized. Some of the occupants swam to the shore, the others being rescued by a small boat.

P. J. DONOVAN

We give above the portrait of P. J. Donovan, the centre fielder of the Brooklyn Club, of the National League. He was born March 16, 1865, at Lawrence, Mass., where he learned to play ball. His professional career commenced in 1886, when he played in the outfield for the professional club that represented Lawrence in the New England League. He concluded with the Lawrence team in 1887 until it disbanded, and finished his career with the Somers Club, also of the same association. Donovan had an excellent batting record in his first two seasons, ranking twelfth in the official averages of the New England League in 1886 and eleventh in 1887. In 1888 and 1889 Donovan played centre field for the London (Ont.) Club, and greatly distinguished himself by his hard hitting and fine fielding, leading the International Association in the former season. He made five successive safe hits in a championship contest in 1889. At the commencement of the present season Donovan was under engagement with the Boston Club, of the National League, with which he remained until a few weeks ago, when the Brooklyn Club, which has been filling the gap in the centre field, vacated by the unfortunate break down of Corkhill. He has proved a valuable acquisition to the Brooklyn team, being an excellent outfielder, a clever base runner, and a hard hitting left handed batsman. He also ranks high as a coacher.

STRAY SPARKS FROM THE DIAMOND.

Gossip About Ball Tossers from Here, There and Everywhere.

George Munson, the business manager of the Chicago Club, of the Players' League, in an interview Aug. 6, had the following to say bearing on a published interview with A. G. Spalding: "Within the past ten days great stress has been made in certain quarters to establish and fortify the belief that the League clubs have been outdrawing the Brotherhood in the patronage accorded each organization.

Every possible means by the League have been resorted to in the effort to hoodwink the public. Falseification of the figures, as admitted by Spalding, is a mere bagatelle evidently in their process of manipulation. Attendance of 500 to 900 admissions become swollen to ridiculous proportions, appearing to be paid for figures for the 1888 and 1889 National League method is to make a farce of the business. Paveses are more plentiful than water. Passes for each, for two games, in fact, for every game of each week, are placed in barber shops, saloons, and other public places, where they are given without the asking. Is it any wonder, in the face of such questionable tactics, that the National League officials have the barefaced temerity to claim that they are outdrawing the Brotherhood? Practice of this character produces contagion, and places a premium upon the. The purpose is malicious. Perpetrated to injure the Brotherhood, that is to say, however, it largely reacts to their own detriment. It cheapens their entertainment with the estimation of fair minded people, and simply demonstrates that the Brotherhood presents an attraction worth seeing and worth paying to see. I have read Spalding's interview carefully. It is the harangue of an individual sick at heart and sorely distressed in mind over the aggravation superinduced by failures and losses in business. Spalding is a hard loser. He has shown it in his wails against the Players' League, and it is plainly visible in his statements published. In the first place, Spalding tells the truth in part when he adds that the number of people who have attended the games at his park have been grossly exaggerated one hundred per cent. In giving the figures for publication he could easily have kept within the bounds of veracity and told where his attendance had been given out as high as three hundred per cent over the actual and honest count. The publication of his exaggerated attendance, day in and out, has become the laughing stock of the city, and he was compelled to tell the truth and justify himself by saying we are likewise engaged in the same line of business. Mr. Spalding and his friends are invited to attend our games at Brotherhood Park at regular rates, with alrath checks and keep tab on our attendance, and can open free tickets, lithograph or otherwise outside of those used by newsmen.

The Newarks appeared Aug. 5, at Washington, at schedule time, and were awarded the game through default of the home team.

President Von der Ahe, of the St. Louis Club, of the American Association, has made the following offer to his players: If they win the American Association pennant he will give every man he has under contract a present of $100. If they win the world championship he will give them one-half of the gate receipts for the series. Mr. Von der Ahe has no desire to make any arrangement, but will do what is right for the series.

The Philadelphias scored a victory

New York vs. Philadelphia.

The Philadelphians scored a victory from the New Yorks, Aug. 9, in this city, by timely bunching of their hits in the seventh and eighth innings. Up to the seventh inning Keefe pitched in great form, and the chances were about even for either team to win. In this inning, however, the visitors sized him up for two runs, and followed him with two more, in the eighth, and thus won the game in their favor. Sanders pitched steadily and was very effective, especially when men were on the bases and a hit would have been good for a run. Richardson's fielding was excellent, his stopping many apparently safe hits and throwing the runner out at first by a close shave. Shindie also played well. Gore's batting and fielding were features.

The Philadelphians again won Aug. 11, when they pounded O'Day's pitching all over the field. He was hit hard in the second, fourth and sixth innings, when the visitors scored fourteen of their fifteen runs, three base hits and errors. Hause and Connor then took over. The Ewings—Buck and John—were down on the score cards as catcher and pitcher, but at the last moment Brown and O'Day were substituted. Brown did good work, especially in the ninth, when he got two home runs and a single. O'Day, however, did about as poorly as could be expected. Richardson and Connor played well, their fielding being of the best. For the visitors, Shindie and Picketts did the best fielding work. Warr, Mulvey and Sanders running well, while Griffin, Shindie, Fogarty and Wood did the best hitting.

Boston vs. Brooklyn.

The Brooklyns played brilliantly Aug. 9, at Boston, and scored a well earned victory from the home team. Only one error—a wild throw by Weyhing—marred the visitors' fielding. Weyhing pitched with telling effect, retiring seven of the Bostonians on strikes and sending only two to base on balls. Daley, on the other hand, was very wild, sending six men to base on balls and he made three wild pitches, which were very damaging; besides he was hit hard, especially in the fifth and eighth innings. The Bostonians were without the services of Nash and Stovey, which weakened them considerably. Kelly played third base brilliantly, having two particularly fine assists. Gummert took Stovey's place and batted well. Ward carried off the honors both at the bat and in the field.

The Championship Record to Aug. 11.

The Brooklyn's Retain Their Lead in the Race, with the Philadelphians and Boston Following Closely.

The Brooklyns beat the Boston for the sixth time, Aug. 6, at Brooklyn, the beginning of the series being then played. A wild throw by Long, a base on balls given bunting, a single by Foutz and a home run by Terry gave the Brooklyns four runs in the first inning, and a double by Burns and a single by Foutz yielded another run in the eighth. Terry kept the visitors' hits widely scattered until the ninth inning, when, after Bennett and Smith had been hit, he sent three more to base, sent a single to Burns and allowed the Bostonians to take the lead. Safe hits by G. Smith and Collins and a wild throw by O'Day, helped the Brooklyns to the winning run after two men were out in the last half of the ninth inning. Foutz's batting was the feature, he hitting safely four times in succession.

Hard hitting and wild pitching marked the game played Aug. 7, when the Bostonians again gave up losses and O'Day was alternated in the box for the visitors. They were batted safely eighteen times and were hit hard sixteen times. Terry made two of the three scattering hits credited to the visitors. Only two hits were made off Terry in the first five innings. In the sixth and seventh, however, the New Yorks bunched seven hits, which yielded three runs, two base earned runs. The manager of the New York Club, made his first appearance with the New Yorks. Burns was sick, and Clark took his place at right field, with the Brooklyns.

The Bostonians managed to reverse the above result Aug. 11, by bunching six of their twelve hits in the fourth and ninth innings, and giving five to their visitors. Daley had a command of the ball and was very sharp; the visitors making only three hits of him. Brooklyn's only run was made in the first inning, when Ward hit safely, stole second, and, aided by a wild pitch and a sacrifice, drove in a run. The Bostonians, however, visitors could do nothing with him until the eighth, when Cook hit safely, but was put out on a double play. Then Ward made a base hit, but was put out on trying to steal second. The visitors made some brilliant plays despite their errors.

Cleveland vs. Pittsburgh.

Bakely, barring a little wildness, pitched splendidly Aug. 9, at Cleveland, and the home team had little trouble in scoring a victory from the Pittsburghs. Besides, Cleveland played faultlessly in the field, while the Pittsburghs made two errors, one of which was costly. Staley was batted hard in two innings—the first and fifth—when, on six hits, four runs were scored, two earned. The visitors made only two batters give the visitors their only run. McAleer and Radford had between them ten chances in the outfield, and some of them very difficult ones. Corcoran and Robinson had between them twenty chances, all except one were good.

Wise's fielding, despite his two errors, was of the highest order. Pfeffer too played brilliantly. O'Neil, Ryan, Hoy and Twitchell, made many difficult running catches. Rowe's all round work and Duffy's base running were features.

Pitcher Mike Morrison, who was recently released by the Syracuse team of the American Association, is at odds with President Frazer over a question of salary. When he called President Frazer, the club president said his salary, he was told that only $43 was due him, while he had given up $20 and laid off for poor pitching against Columbus on July 23 in Syracuse. At that four days' pay had been deducted. Morrison claims that he never was asked to leave. Morrison claims that he never was informed of his suspension or fine till he went to settle up with Frazer. He says that on July 23, when he was according to Frazer, under contract, he pitched an exhibition game for the Syracuse at Utica. He has placed his claim in the hands of Attorney Drake of Syracuse for protection. Ex-Manager Fessenden has made affidavit to the effect that he has no knowledge of either fine or suspension, although in charge of the team at the time. Morrison has consulted with Phelps, and will appeal to the Board of Arbitration.

The following card was sent to the press by the players of the New York team of the Players' League, and was signed by all the players except Johnson, O'Rourke, Whitney and Clegg. The card reads as follows: "We know to be true in thorough accord with the sentiment of your resolution. A rumor accredited to an unknown player, concerning the fealty of William Ewing to the Brotherhood of Players having been circulated in The Sunday World, we desire to say that any such rumor is false, malicious and does injustice not alone to Mr. Ewing himself, but to the organization which he represents. We desire to say that the release of Mr. Ewing is also absolutely untrue. We are not only satisfied that he is true to our cause, but appreciate the hard, honest and remarkable work he has done on and off the field for the last season."

The Wissahickon Club is temporarily in a state of disarray, although the stockholders say the team will remain intact throughout the season. Previous to game Aug. 9, with Hartford, Coogan, Carl, Keay, Lynch and Galligan refused to play because of the payment of salaries not being forthcoming, the five players took off their uniforms, and their places were filled by local players. The directors say the strikers will be replaced by good talent. The club is not at present financially sound, but the board of directors will be remedied. The striking players claim that they had just cause for taking the step they did.

Pitcher Edward Morris was released Aug. 8 by the Pittsburgh Club of the Players' League. This action was the result of an investigation of the newspaper charges that several members of the club were not paid and were out of ball playing condition in consequence. A meeting of the Board of Directors of the club was held during the morning of Aug. 8. Carroll, one of the men accused of being present at the meeting, was not present to the accusation. Nevertheless, it was decided to dispose of Morris' case and hold the others over.

The amount at stake was £200, and the latter, whose time was 40 min. 40 sec., was the better time than the distance had proved. The race was supervised by Eugene Buckley, J. B. Connolly, J. S. New Grand Opera House ROCHESTER, N. Y.,

One of the Handsomest Theatres in America,

OPENED FOR THE SEASON,
SATURDAY EVENING, AUG. 9,

WITH

"ONE OF THE BRAVEST."

THE FOLLOWING ARE EXTRACTS FROM THE ROCHESTER PRESS:

A PRETTY THEATRE—THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE HAS BEEN GREATLY IMPROVED.—Every time a new manager has taken charge of the Grand Opera House during the past ten years, it has been given over through the press that much needed changes would be made in the interior of the theatre. Last night John Hopkins, an experienced theatrical man, took hold of the place, and as usual, the announcement was made that improvements would be made. It was not generally supposed that this announcement was made to attract attention to his presence, but the supposition was incorrect. Mr. Hopkins has proved to be a man of his word and changes have been made at the theatre that require regular recognition, so complete has been the transformation.

THE THEATRE COMPLETELY REMODELED.—A report was given at the New Grand Opera House last evening. The change has been complete. From pit to dome the house has been repaired, decorated and furnished. The decorations are of the most modern, while the colorings are of the Pompeian style.—THE POST-EXPRESS.

Such a transformation in so short a time was a great surprise to the many guests who attended the reception at the New Grand last night. It is now one of the handsomest theatres in the State.—MORNING HERALD.
